Course Director: Hartono (INDONESIA)

Specialized nutrition support (SNS) has become an indispensible part of patient care to reduce morbidity and mortality associated with critical illness. However, since SNS is not routinely required for all hospitalised patient, physicians have to develop expertise in identifying patients at risk of malnutrition and provide effective and safe nutritional support. The aim of this programme is to strengthen the physician’s knowledge on SNS, especially about clinical nutrition, and help them develop expertise in the provision of SNS. The course, with the help of the panel of experts from ESPEN, taps into the latest scientific knowledge through a combination of lectures and case presentations.
